

NAME: Dr. Joseph Steindl

ADDRESS: Strassergasse 36, Vienna 19, Austria

Dr. Steindl is a young economist about 25 years old, who in spite of his great youth has already published a number of interesting articles on economic theory in different German and Austrian journals. He has a Ph.D. in economics. Up to the present he was employed by the Austrian Institute for Trade Cycle Research, but I hear that he has lost this position for political reasons. As much as I know he is not Jewish, but has some political sympathies which would make it impossible for him to get a job in Austria. His main interest is economic theory, but he also has been working with Dr. Morgenstern in the Austrian Institute for Trade Cycle Research, and he has considerable experience in applied economics. He reads and writes French and English, but his English is not very fluent. I think, however, that he would adapt himself rather rapidly in this country, and it would not take him too long to perfect this language.

From Tinkler

SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

Bodleian Library
Oxford University Library Services

