

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
1 To have is to be: is that the question?	1
Private property and materialism	4
Material symbols	6
Self, other and material symbols of identity	9
The rise of mass consumer society: we are what we have	11
Identity through possessions	13
2 Biological accounts of possessions and property: The 'acquisitive instinct' past and present	19
The 'acquisitive instinct'	23
Sociobiology: the 'acquisitive instinct' in modern disguise?	25
Possession-related behaviour in different cultures	28
Possessive behaviour and childhood	30
Humans and other animals	32
Social aspects of material possessions	34
Instinct revisited	36
Conclusion	39
Notes	40
3 The individual-centred approach: Material possessions as parts of the extended self	41
Possessions as parts of the self	43
A developmental perspective on possessions and self	48