

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Cover Art Note	xiii
Bibliographic Note	xvii
Prologue	xix

PART I CLAIM AND TITLE: ORIGINS

1. The Meaning of Property in Things	3
Property Is a Universal and Uniquely Human Custom	6
Humans Locate the Meaning of Property within a Thing	15
2. All Animals Use Things, Specifically Food	22
Food Is Unlikely to Be the Original Object of Property	23
Tools Have Potential Because of How We Make and Use Them	25
Symbolic Thought Makes Meaning Possible	29
Meaning Makes Composite Tools Possible	37
3. Primates Socially Transmit Tool Practices, but Humans Share Meaning-Laden Customs	42
Tool Use Is Embodied Knowledge	44
Property Embodies the Claim "This Is Mine!"	47
Humans Socially Transmit Property with Moral Force	57
4. What Is Right Is Not Taken Out of the Rule, but Let the Rule Arise Out of What Is Right	60
What Is Right Is Not Derived from the Rule	66
But the Rule Arises from Our Knowledge of What Is Right	68
Two Different Experiments Illustrate the Proposition	69
Beginning with What Is Meant by "What Is Right"	75
Resentment Prompts People to Act	80
Property Emerges to Protect Us from Real and Positive Hurt	85
5. The Custom of Property Is Physically Contained	88
Etymology Evidences Both Custom and Containment	88
A Linguistic Convention Emerges with the Tiny Word "In"	92
The Semantics of "In a Thing" Physically Contain Property	97
Eventually the Use of "Property in a Thing" Wanes	100
But "I Have Property in X" Conveys Richer Meaning Than "X Is My Property"	