

character of the income relation between these groups and yet think that there is this vague ordering which would explain how a regular pattern of the total income distribution comes about at all. In particular, it seems essential that the tail of the distribution is mostly dominated by income from wealth, which assures that the total income distribution conforms to the Pareto pattern.